

UK Draught Beers

Welcome to the real ale bar.

This year we will have more beers than ever before at Ealing Beer Festival. At the time of writing over 300 are on order but the exact number seems to be fluctuating by the hour. We hope there will be beers to suit all tastes, ranging from 2.5% ABV up to a staggering (probably literally!) 10.5% stout. The range is a variety of returning friends and some new faces.

A few words on how it all works. The beers are arranged roughly alphabetically across three bars, each of which is named for one our friends in breweryland. A few may appear in odd places, often because they were late replacements so a little juggling may be required. We do not hold beer back. Once one becomes drinkable it will display an A4 label, an indication that it is available. The labels come in a variety of colours, roughly matching the dots you will find in the tasting notes which follow and indicating which style of beer lurks within. There is a key below.

It is not easy to pick out beers for special mentions but here goes. This year we have three festival special beers. Those of you who were with us last year and enjoyed the XT Raspberry Beer will be interested to know that they are providing us with two special fruit beers this year: Apricot and Blackcurrant. Quite how you make a blonde beer with blackcurrants I am looking forward to finding out. The third festival special is from Aeronaut. This is one of the two new brewpubs to have opened in Acton since the last festival. They will be doing a Ruby Mild for us, not least because in addition to being the 25th Ealing Beer Festival, it is also CAMRA West Middlesex's 40th anniversary year.

We also have a new beer from Twickenham, Mosaic Pale, making its debut at the festival. At 3.2% ABV it should be perfect for drinking in the fine summer weather we are hoping for.

Amongst other rarities are a couple of beers from Arkells which are only available for a limited period and four from Blue Anchor in Helston, Cornwall, which are not often seen in these parts. The same can also be said of Donnington, a brewery set in an idyllic location in the Cotswolds which is partly water powered. We will also have beers from Heavy Industry making their London debut all the way from north Wales but it is OK to order them in English. High House Nettle Beer could be interesting. When I (selflessly) visited the brewery in May, they hadn't brewed it yet.

Finally, a quick word of thanks to all of those involved in the whole process of selecting, ordering, preparing and serving the real ales at Ealing Beer Festival's 25th incarnation. All are volunteers and without them it simply would not happen.

Cheers
